

Lost Traveller by Vanilla Base

Reviewed by Michael Lind of The Blindfold Experience

(Member of the Brecon Indie Review Team)

Vanilla Base is a band originating from Madrid, Spain. For this particular song, the arrangement is scaled down to just a piano and the vocalist Julie Martin. And the arrangement really lets Julie's vocals shine. From the beginning the piano plays a beautiful intro, setting the mood of the song. The playing is very emotional and dynamic, laying the perfect foundation for Julie's vocals.

Julie sings with a controlled emotion and a wonderful vibrato, telling a story about meeting new people, seeing new places. I feel that Julie just like me gets energy from the interaction with new people and places. And like Julie says: "There's a world to discover"

The song is tied together by piano interludes with just the right expression, and we even get an amazing little piano solo before it ends by confirming the message: "[It] makes me feel so alive"

A great song and arrangement!