

Time Of Your life (Friday Night) - Brent Newbold

Reviewed by Leigh Thomas

Brecon Indie Review Team

Want to be transported back to a time when life was uncomplicated, carefree and full of fun? And let's face it, who doesn't? Then wrap your ears around Brent Newbold's 'Time Of your Life (Friday Night)'! This punk infused glam rock anthem beckons one to drop everything, forget your worries and live life to the fullest.

"Feelgood" energy radiates from choruses of crunchy guitars, power chords and driving rhythms as Brent lyrically insights and invites the listener to cut loose inhibitions and emancipate oneself from the chains of the working week. Naturally, guitar rules and solos celebrate the occasion with timeless duals of Stratocaster and Les Paul. Licks and pinch harmonics abound in this jam-packed guitar fest and serve to keep energy levels at 11.

Brent breaks the song down with sermons addressing the listener and immersing one in a scene at a crowded bar at the feet of a rocking party live band. The song never loses steam and screaming guitar solos endure as the song fades out, giving the impression that the party will never end!

With all of the hallmarks of classic rock in place, this one will have you burning your work clothes, cranking your boom box, and wishing it was Friday Night every night