

Phoenix and The SilverVoodoos – Follow You

Reviewed by Drew Jarvie (The Delerium Trees)

Brecon Indie Review Team

Another classic punk rock song from Phoenix and the SilverVoodoos, no surprise they are continually superb and always entertaining.

‘Follow You’ starts almost in disarray like the Jesus And Mary Chain gone berserk minus the feedback, intentionally all over the place before the song really gets going.

Phoenix Christa, the band’s vocalist, appears to like a scrap and she appears to like a scrap with the band’s instruments, her own guitar, the brilliant Roland King also on guitar and going by this, a clearly demented but wonderful Linda King, who seemingly hits everything in reach. Note to myself, do not stand near the cymbals. It is almost like Lene Lovich versus The Stranglers, who will win. Easy answer, we all win as Christa’s vocal like Lovich is a nervy almost questioning but powerful weapon, perfect for the assault coming from the instruments.

The guitar solo is punk soloing at its best but with clear skill, The Skids would love this. Beneath the solo, rhythm guitar and drums crash and clash. A wall of sound, a mesmerizing swirl of sound. It would be a great night to see this live!

As the video shows boots are clearly made for walking, albeit in some very strange methods. Nice boots though! We should all find our boots, walk in a strange way, but walk straight to the nearest venue to see Phoenix, Roland and Linda – Phoenix and the SilverVoodoos!