

Andrew Neil – Lying To Myself

Reviewed by Mad West Sea

Brecon Indie Review Team

You'd be l-l-l-ying to yourself if you denied yourself from hearing the new song from Andrew Neil!

His newest song, Lying To Myself, is Americana at its greatest. The song pumps along like a train, eager to please.

Joining Andrew as he smokes his last cigarette is the band TIEZZI. Andrew in Charlottesville, VA, hooked up with Travis, Timmy, and Justin from nearby Richmond, VA to knock out his vision. While Andrew holds down the acoustic and vocals, the guys from TIEZZI fill out the sound. Travis also sings backing vocals throughout the choruses.

As he carries the world's troubles on his back, Andrew is #1 on the Reverbnation charts for his area.

It's really no wonder, this song could easily sit with Mudcrutch, or Drive By Truckers, or anything else played on Outlaw Country on Sirius XM. It's a big feat, but when you've written nearly 400 songs in 13 years, despite no musical training, it makes the summit that much sweeter when reached.

Andrew has had experiences that many of us could not comprehend, and he draws from those experiences with his music. The passion, pain, and unpolished honesty that comes from his songs and music transfers the listener into the song.

There's no need to lie to yourself any further; it's all right, this is a great track!

Make sure to check out Andrew on his social media links, including his Label Tree Heart Records

<https://t.co/IKZkak61at>

<https://t.co/hlFmzOBydz>

<https://t.co/YjhwOPa3UB>

<https://t.co/JAsbsE7FdR>

Also find his music on all streaming services, however we recommend these pages as they ensure the artist is properly compensated.